Course Information

ISO 14001, is the latest Environmental Management Systems (EMS) standard, published by the International Organization for Standardization, in September 2015. It is the third published ISO EMS standard. Prior to this, ISO 14001:2004 was the accepted international standard for EMS. This free online course provides an insight into the elements of the ISO 14001:2015 EMS standard. The publication of ISO 14001 is driven by multiple factors, including the re-standardization of ISO itself, for example ISO 9001.

This course will help you to understand: why ISO took the initiative to publish the ISO 14001 EMS standard; the potential benefits that it can deliver to organizations; how the standard works; why the PDCA approach is valid, and more. Moreover, by completing this course it will be easier to compare the requirements of the ISO 14001:2015 standard to ISO 14001:2004. This course includes activities to help learners understand and remember concepts and practices relating to environmental management systems, and it focuses on internal auditing and management reviews.

In addition, consultants and provisional auditors will benefit from the knowledge and concepts presented in this course. Companies, multi-national organizations and small-to-medium size enterprises, will benefit from this course, as a starter or as refresher training material, for staff associated with their organization. This course presents complex occupational environmental management principles, through common, everyday, easy-to-assimilate examples. This course provides a solid foundation for learners to understand the basis on which ISO 14001:2015 is developed. So start the course today and learn how to adopt and implement the ISO 14001:2015 standard in a supportive or proactive role. ISO 9001:2015/Amd 1:2024 about 'climatic change actions' is also incorporated in this course.

Course Information

Food safety is one of the biggest humanitarian challenges our world faces today. Altered and unhealthy food items make their way to market shelves and get consumed by people, causing various health problems. This problem implies the need for a robust food safety management (FSM) system that ensures that food remains uncontaminated and guards the supply chain through which food reaches consumers. Creating such a system requires that we take a holistic approach by implementing a standardized approach.

The FSSC (Food Safety System Certification) 22000 is a globally recognized and accepted standard that helps organizations related to the food supply chain create an environment that ensures the safety of the food items being produced or processed. However, many food safety professionals need a clear explanation of the FSSC 22000 standard and its requirements. With this in mind, Exoexcellence Consultants have developed this short food safety course to provide an easy explanation of FSSC 22000 and its benefits and requirements to show you how it fits into establishing and maintaining reliable food safety management systems.

This course introduces you to the FSSC 22000 standard and lays out its organizational benefits. We then show you how to meet the certification's requirements and guide you through the steps taken to earn your FSSC certification. We describe the eight categories of a food supply chain and provide examples. Ourr last two topics are dedicated to explaining the requirements of the standard. Overall, the course has taken a comprehensive approach to make these requirements easier to understand. Enroll today and learn the basics of establishing a practical food safety management system in this food safety course that explains how to manage supply chains to protect consumers from contaminated food.
